Mahlzeit : The first German restaurant in Yangon

Are you boring eating local food in Myanmar (Burma)?

You may have been dining in Burmese restaurant, Chinese restaurant and some Western restaurants but when it comes to German food there will be a little difficult to find German restaurants in Yangon (<http://www.mylann.com>).

Hey, wait, Mahlzeit is here that will let you taste the first ever German taste in Myanmar.

Mahlzeit is the first restaurant in Yangon serving German cuisine. Beside the famous pork knuckles and familiar sausages there are many more delicious dishes and exquisite desserts from the various regions of Germany. Mahlzeit provides you with traditional food of every region and serves in addition a great choice of beers, organic juices, excellent coffee and tea.

One of our specialities is the German answer to Italian Pizza, called Flammkuchen.

“At Mahlzeit Restaurant we use only locally grown organic vegetables and fresh meat. They work together with companies who share our belief that excellence is the gradual result of always striving to do better”, says General Manager Magnus Scherr.

Magnus Scherr was born and raised in Munich, the Capital of Bavaria, which is world-famous for the Oktoberfest. The Chef developed his interest in cuisine at an early age and got rich experience over the last 20 years in the industry. He worked at many hotels and restaurants all over the Asia Pacific region and was a vital part of several openings.

There is also a Cafe' section in Mahlzeit restaurant.

In Germany, bread is not just food – it is part of the culture. More than 300 different types of breads and a variety of more than 1200 pastries made in Germany. Bread is the basis of morning and evening meals.

We at Mahlzeit Café serve fresh baked German bread, Bavarian pretzels but also Bagels and Donuts from America or Croissants from France. From 8.00am in the morning until 10.00pm. Seven days a week.
